

2 The Iguana

VIEWS

Feb. 23, 2001

JTF-Bravo

Commanders' Corner

Putting Morale, Welfare and Recreation services to work

By Scott Brennan
MWR

The Morale, Welfare and Recreation (MWR) facility at Soto Cano is one of the best in the military and offers a wide variety of activities for everyone regardless of their length of stay in Honduras. The following are just some of the facilities, activities and events MWR offers. For more information, come by Bldg. H401 or call ext. 4268.

The library offers free paperback books, reference materials, newspapers, periodicals, books of all kinds, VHS videos, and music CDs. There is also a special section supporting Education Center classes and an inter-library loan program with Puerto Rico.

The base theater shows movies provided by AAFES on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Double features are shown on Saturdays and Sundays.

At the arts and crafts complex, you can make your own wood projects, wicker furniture, and hammocks. MWR employees are available to advise and assist the novice as well as the master craftsman.

The swimming pool provides a relaxing environment to catch some rays and get rid of all that stress. Lifeguards are always on duty and water is tested to meet U.S. sanitary standards.

The fitness center offers a variety of Nautilus, Life Fitness, weight equipment and exercise bikes. Aerobics classes, weight instructions and martial arts are also offered throughout the day.

There are a variety of sports facilities for tennis, basketball, racquetball, volleyball, horseshoes, soccer, and softball and as well as a running track. Intramural sports are played year round. Equipment is available for checkout and sporting officials officiate when requested.

The recreation center offers video machines, pool and ping-pong tables, card tables, weekly tournaments, bike checkout and more.

At the MWR marina at Lake Yojoa, there are four ski boats and two pontoon boats available on a first-come, first-service basis and usage is FREE (all you pay for is gas). We offer water skiing, knee boarding, fishing, canoes, and sail boats. There are also beautiful waterfalls about forty minutes from the lake.

The MWR main office offers trophy and plaque engraving, VHS video cameras, and racket stringing. MWR offers tours and travel to various destinations. MWR provides free ground transportation to/from the place of visit. MWR does not use any hotel or service that has not already been "checked out." MWR consistently strives to obtain the best possible prices for the American military. The following are some of the trips that are sponsored by MWR:

The Valley of Angels is a small shopping town about two hours from base. Wood items, ceramic, leather craft, sandals, etc are available for purchase.

La Ceiba is a beautiful city located about five hours from base. Beaches, water rafting (seasonal), snorkeling, and mountain trips are available. Once a year this city celebrates one of the biggest carnivals in Central America.

The Bay Islands (Roatan, Utila, and Guanaja) offer world-class scuba and snorkeling. Available activities also include sun bathing on magnificent beaches, island tours, and access to a dolphin reserve, discos, sunset cruise, wind surfing, kayaking and fishing.

Copan is the site of ancient Mayan ruins; which are the main attraction. Hotels offers horseback riding, pools, bars and restaurants with access to souvenir shopping, discos and tours to other sights in the Copan valley.

San Pedro Sula is the industrial capital of Honduras. It has nice restaurants, shopping malls, discos, tennis, swimming, casinos and everything you can ask from any big city.

Tegucigalpa is the capital of Honduras. It is also a big city with museums, restaurants, cathedrals, shopping malls, etc.

Enjoy your time at Soto Cano and welcome to your MWR.

Chaplain's Corner

Special day for separated Valentines

By Chaplain (CPT) David Phillips
JTF-Bravo Chaplain

We always think of Valentine's Day as the ultimate day of love toward those whom we love. Yet, here at Soto Cano, this day can be a little empty because those that we love cannot be with us. Thus, we are left with no way to show and express our love because, obviously, we are not with them. Even though, we are separated and old wisdom tells us that distance makes the heart grow fonder, we grow to question that old proverb because there is nothing that takes the place of being there with that significant other.

So in this separation, how should we then act? Well, the first thought that comes to mind is commitment. Love is many things, but first and foremost it is a commitment to the one or ones we love. The last thing our loved ones need is for us to think we are on holiday and that anything goes. While they are left home and we are here, commitment means we honor that love by being true to the ones we treasure the most. Paul, the apostle, said it best in I Corinthians 13: 4-8 when he said, "Love is patient, love is kind. It does not envy, it does not boast, it is not proud. It is it keeps no record of wrongs. Love does not delight in evil, but rejoices with the truth. It always protects, always trusts, always hopes, always preserves. Love never fails."

How easy it is to mess up and ruin something that is good in our lives. It only takes one indiscreet act to ruin what we treasure most, our families, for good. To pay honor to the ones we love means to honor that commitment we made to them in the beginning. There is always the need to continually tell them that we love them and reassure them while we are gone, but honoring that commitment says it all.

In the time we are here at Soto Cano and away from our loved ones, let us build on our relationships that count the most even if it is from afar. There are so many ways we can foster growth in our relationships such as old-fashioned letter writing, e-mail, phone calls, (when available), calling cards and greeting cards.

Let's let those we love know how much they mean to us and that without them, we would probably be lost. This time of separation can be one of growth if we work at it. Anything worth having requires work, and our marriages and families constantly need our attention to make them work.

Love when taken for granted, dies, so it deserves

The Iguana

EDITORIAL STAFF
JTF-Bravo Commander
COL Michael Wood

Public Affairs Director
1st Lt. Kim Garbett

Superintendent
Master Sgt. Jeffrey Bohn

Editor
SPC Jeremy Heckler

Phototechnician
Martin Chahin

E-mail: pao@jtfb-emh1.army.mil

Website: <http://www.southcom.mil/home/jtfbravo>

This funded, joint U.S. Air Force/Army newspaper is an authorized publication for members of the U.S. military overseas. Contents of The Iguana do not necessarily reflect the official view of, and are not endorsed by, the U.S. government, Department of Defense or the departments of the Air Force or Army.

Content is edited, prepared and provided by the Joint Task Force-Bravo Public Affairs Office, in Building D-06. Telephone numbers are 011-504-234-4634, ext. 4150 or 4676. Fax is ext. 4550, or DSN 449-4150/4676. Readers with story ideas should call the Public Affairs office. All photographs are property of JTF-Bravo unless otherwise noted.

PRINTED BY PUBLYN SA

That's your opinion

What is the most difficult thing about being away?

"Being away from my wife and children. I've missed my daughters' year at school and a year of their growing up."

Senior Master Sgt. Bob Jenkins
Fire Dawgs

"Separation from my children. You miss a year of their life, their school, when they're sick ... just the day-to-day affairs of their lives."

Maj. Rolando Greenfield-Casas
Base Civil Engineer

"Being away from my family. It is hard being away from all of the people who care about me most."

PFC Debra Hunt
ARFOR

"I miss my family. I'm not used to being away from my wife for this long."

SPC Israel Santiago
130th Engineer Battalion

AAFES tests program to eliminate social security numbers on checks

DALLAS, (AFPN) -- In today's financial climate, where the issue of personal privacy is of the utmost importance, the issue of Social Security numbers on checks is fast becoming a major concern among shoppers around the country and worldwide.

Many contend that the use of Social Security numbers on checks is an open invitation for identity theft.

Currently, AAFES cashiers enter the Social Security number of the sponsor printed on the check. The numbers are either pre-printed or must be printed somewhere on the check by hand prior to cashing.

In an effort to eliminate the need for Social Security numbers on checks, AAFES has set up a three-phase process. The first phase was a pilot "proof-of-concept" test conducted in November at five sites on three military installations. These included the AAFES store in Dallas; the service station and shoppette at Fort Sam Houston, Texas; and the service station and shoppette at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

Under the new system, the Social Security number of the person presenting the check will be entered. This will be accomplished by taking the Social Security number off the presenter's ID card. The Social Security number will not be required to be shown on the check. The check will be scanned to obtain the routing number, account number and check number.

The testing period for this second phase, what AAFES calls its "Check Acceptance Test," began in early February at the exchanges in San Antonio and is expected to run through the end of the month. If the program goes as expected, a world-wide rollout is planned to start in early April.

"It is AAFES' policy to take every practical step to ensure the privacy of the service members, retirees and the family members we serve," said Tim Bailey, AAFES management information systems fiscal support branch chief. "AAFES has made this commitment as a part of our mission to better serve our customers throughout the world."

Tilley tells soldiers to stay focused

By Joe Burlas
Army News Service

WASHINGTON - Seven months into the job as the Army's top noncommissioned officer, Sgt. Maj. of the Army Jack Tilley is urging soldiers to stay focused in their lanes of responsibility and not worry about what they cannot change or affect.

That was one of several messages Tilley delivered to more than 230 active, Reserve and Guard senior NCOs at the first Nominative Command Sergeant Major Conference, held Jan. 8-12 at the Sergeants Major Academy, Fort Bliss, Texas. Typically, nominative command sergeants major are those who serve at one-star commands or higher. Staying in your lane is also the main message Tilley takes to the field. Since starting as Sergeant Major of the Army June 23, Tilley has talked to more than 30,000 troops at 40 Army installations in the United States and overseas.

"Too often people get concerned and off track worrying about things they are not responsible for nor have any control over," Tilley said. "My message to all soldiers is to stay focused on the things within your lane of responsibility — let others take care of the things they are responsible for."

Chief of Staff of the Army GEN Eric Shinseki announced in October that Army troops will start wearing the beret in garrison June 14 to symbolize the Army's transformation to a lighter, more deployable force.

time to move on and start preparing our soldiers by teaching them now how to wear and maintain the beret."

Backing those words with action, Tilley scheduled a class to instruct conference attendees on the proper wear and maintenance of the new headgear.

In addition to delivering his own messages to the field, Tilley also gives updates of Department of the Army issues that directly affect soldiers during his visits. The top issues soldiers want to hear about are pay, quality of life, retention, TRICARE and retirement, Tilley said.

"I have always been a field soldier and I still consider myself to be one," the sergeant major said. "I see my job as getting out there — taking the pulse of the Army by talking to soldiers and bringing the issues I don't have the answers for back to DA."

Prior to his current assignment, Tilley had never held an Army staff job at the Pentagon.

"I never really knew what exactly went on around here until I had been in the job for a couple of months," he said. "I now know there are all sorts of people here at the Pentagon who are genuinely concerned about soldiers and who are constantly working for their benefit."

"I think the sergeants major who attended the conference caught a glimpse of that concern and of how important NCOs really are when they saw the Secretary of the Army, the Chief of Staff of the Army and more than a dozen other senior Army leaders show up at the conference and take the time out of their

Feb. 23, 2001

JTF-Bravo

The joy of victory, agony of defeat

By 1st Lt. Kim Garbett
Public Affairs

It can perhaps be considered the military version of the Olympics. There are the intense rivalries. There is the team spirit. There is the knowledge that no matter who wins or loses, all will have given it their winning efforts.

Joint Task Force-Bravo Organizational Day, held all day long Feb. 15, kicked off on a bright Honduran morning at the soccer fields with birds singing in the background and the sun shining down as music blared from loud speakers on the fields. Everyone knew it was going to be a hot one. The sweat would be pouring down and PT shirts would be drenched within minutes.

Teams could be seen gathering up at their respective areas for whatever sport they were competing in that day. Teams from AFFOR, ARFOR, MEDEL, and the 1st Battalion, 228th Aviation Regiment slugged it out for Task Force bragging rights. Who would come out on top? Soldiers and airmen lined up for battle as the first event began a little after 8 a.m. All around, balls flew, legs pumped in action as sweat began pouring down the faces of competitors and fans alike.

Organizational Day is designed to improve cohesiveness, morale and esprit de corps among the men and women, both airmen and soldiers at JTF-Bravo. Typically held yearly at this time spearheaded by AFFOR, teams challenged each other in a number of to dizzy bat, spirits were high and adrenaline pumped. In addition to those events, racquetball, volleyball, horseshoes, softball, the barrel roll, the 4x1 mile relay, 9-ball, swimming and the 4x400 were among the many other events going on simultaneously throughout the morning. If you didn't watch carefully, you could miss that dizzy bat competition going on at one field while the soccer game played on or while the volleyball was spiked.

Not to be forgotten was the illustrious field goal kick. One of the most memorable kicks sailed up and over a fire truck sitting out on the fields, spiking the head of our beloved AFFOR commander, practically knocking him out. As he came to his feet, a little taken aback, he asked where his long-time friendly rival, the 1-228th Aviation Regiment commander, was at, knowing full well that he was in El Salvador assisting with the disaster relief efforts there. It was a bit of comic relief for the day filled with several intense competitions.

After lunch and a few other events, the final event of the day kicked off. Shouts could be heard all the way across the base from the commander's tug-of-war. Heels dug into the fields as the commanders fiercely battled it out. The ARFOR had the toughest team out there, giving it all they had left and took the points gained for the competition.

In the end, after the points were all tallied up and as the sweat was drying, it was AFFOR who came out on top and stole the bragging rights for this joint-

Soldiers and airmen run for their teammates during the 4X400 meter as the teams duked it out for racing supremacy.

A trooper swims for the finish line during the swimming relay race.

Teamwork, determination key for SAR team volunteers

By SPC Jeremy Heckler
Iguana Editor

For many, the idea of being a member of a search and rescue team could be an exciting experience, living the life of a pseudo-superhero as they leave their regular job and slide into the flight suit and rucksack to find victims and save lives.

The members of Joint Task Force-Bravo's search and rescue team come from all over Soto Cano, training for the time they hope never comes. Some may think that this is a job for only the brave folks at the Medical Element, but what makes this team successful is teamwork.

"Everybody can volunteer; MOS is immaterial," said 1SG Samuel Coston, of ARFOR and leader of the SAR team. He said slots are determined on PT score and a strong constitution.

"We ask applicants if they can handle the sight of mangled and decapitated bodies up close, because they are liable to see that and worse at an air crash site," said Coston.

Once they have been accepted into the team, the fun begins. Each Thursday they go on a road march with a 40-pound rucksack with all of their medical supplies in it. The rucksack is a lifeline for casualties in need of urgent medical care.

"My biggest challenge was the road march because I hadn't done it since '89," said SPC Shawn Harding of ARFOR. Harding said that he joined the SAR team because of the challenges it provided him.

"My career started 11 years ago in the National Guard. When I went into the active Army, I wanted to do Ranger school and try everything, but I didn't get the chance," said Harding.

Team members learn how to hike with the ruck as well as rappel out of a UH-60 Blackhawk with it pulling them backwards down the rope.

The team gives members the opportunity to expand their military education. All of the team members become qualified Combat Lifesavers. Team members also become familiar with the "Jaws of Life." They also become familiar with rappelling out of a UH-60 Blackhawk as well as with the special patrol insertion/extraction system, SPIES.

"Doing the rappelling and SPIES was a lot of fun because I thought I never would do it during my career; but here in Honduras I get the opportunity to do that," said SPC Antonio Rivas of ARFOR.

Rivas and Harding left this week for Air Assault School in Fort Polk, La.. While their training never ends, when they receive the alert they are up and ready to go.

Members of the SAR team have assisted on a variety of missions, from locating Honduran Supreme Court Justices to searching for other aircraft.

"Everybody has their own job on the team; one crew assists the medics, while another crew mans the fire extinguishers and another set operates the 'Jaws of Life,'" said Rivas. "When it's time for the real world mission, everyone knows what to do."

Speed and teamwork are essential when lives are in the balance. Members of the team know what they must do and gain satisfaction from doing it.

"It is a good feeling to be part of a team that's a good cause," said Rivas. "People know we are there to assist them in their time of need."

"The first time I was selected to a SAR team, I was proud to be selected, because it was a honor to be called upon to help someone in need," said Coston.

Photo by Martin Chahin

Members of the SAR team give a group thumbs up for their extraction to the UH-60 Blackhawk crew during SPIES training.

Weightlifters give their all for title of 'Mr. Soto Cano Air Base'

By SPC Jeremy Heckler
Iguana editor

On the first day on the way to better fitness, the prospective weightlifter looks at the weights on the racks, taunting him as an almost unreachable goal. Then comes the day when those weights go on the bar, and the weightlifter fights with grit and determination, finally raising the bar over his head in triumph.

A group of competitors from across Soto Cano took on the challenge in a competition of weightlifting excellence. At the end of the day, Norne Walker of Joint Security Forces had his arms raised in triumph as the event's heavy lifter. Walker pressed a total 880 pounds in the bench press and the squat in the 216 pounds-and-over weight class, outdistancing his competition by 80 pounds

"I was just trying to do my personal best," said Walker. "I've been competing for a while, and I've never distinguished myself until today." Walker added that his hardest challenge was moving over to the bench press after giving his all in the squat portion of the competition. Once he got into the event he lifted

"This is the first time that a weightlifting competition has been held at Soto Cano since October 1999," said Josh Hanson of the Fire Dawgs, who coordinated the event.

Hanson used his experience from the last event and from a competition he organized while deployed in Saudi Arabia to get it underway.

In the competition, Hanson set personal bests for the squat at 415 pounds and 285 pounds in the bench press, capturing his weight class, defeating Ronnie Williams and Jared Cleary of ARFOR for the title.

The competitors took on the squat first, facing the wall of the gym where no one could see the amount of pain and effort it took to lift the bar. Some of the competitors pushed on despite their nervousness.

"It seemed a lot harder than a normal day," said Ben Reynolds of JSF. Reynolds took the 156-170 pounds weight class, lifting 260 pounds in the squat and 250 pounds in the bench press. "The bench press really gave me problems, normally I can do a lot more than I did today."

Those who didn't win the competition were still winners for pushing themselves further than they had gone before. Among

Weight(lbs.)	Overall Winner	Lifted
139 & below	Mark Person	475
140-155	Jermichael Hale	575
156-170	Benjamin Reynolds	495
171-185	Joshua Hanson	700
186-199	Christopher Calloway	810
216 & up	Norne Walker	880
Squat
139 & below	Mark Person	250
140-155	Jermichael Hale	315
156-170	Benjamin Reynolds	260
171-185	Joshua Hanson	415
186-199	Christopher Calloway	385
216 & up	Norne Walker	315
Bench Press
139 & below	Mark Person	225
140-155	Jermichael Hale	260
156-170	Benjamin Reynolds	250
171-185	Joshua Hanson	285
186-199	Christopher Calloway	385
216 & up	Norne Walker	445

FEATURES

The Iguana /

Breaking down barriers

Dances, skits show different facets of black culture

By SPC Jeremy Heckler
Iguana Editor

February is African-American History Month and members of Joint Task Force-Bravo worked to break down barriers of stereotyping and decades of misunderstanding in a variety of activities throughout the month.

Troops were first exposed to a part of African culture as the group Dansa Garfuna performed at the dining facility. The group performed native dances to the beat of handmade instruments.

"Their dancing was enlightening," said SPC Albert Alexander of ARFOR. "Even though we all have a common tradition of dance and music, it was something I had not experienced before." He added that it helped provide a new aspect of African-American culture that was very educational.

Skits and presentations on the history of African-Americans and their struggle for freedom and equality highlighted another lunchtime activity. LTC Scott Ciluffo, commander of 1st Battalion, 228th Aviation Regiment, discussed the military accomplishments and history of African-Americans from the Emancipation Proclamation to the history of the 9th and 10th Cavalry Regiments, the Buffalo Soldiers.

The first skit, entitled "The Pride," dealt with the civil rights movement and the differences of Martin Luther King Jr.'s nonviolent approaches to equality, in comparison to the more militant approach advocated by groups such as the Nation of Islam and the Black Panthers.

In this skit, a mother and son whose husband and father was murdered by members of the Klu Klux Klan, were denied any of his insurance benefits because the death was determined to be a suicide.

The mother advocated the nonviolent beliefs of Martin Luther King Jr., and her son advocated violence and revenge.

"The skit was designed to show the best way to handle situations and how to get peace or justice," said Alexander, who played the son in the skit and who also wrote it.

MAJ Joelle Rankins presented a speech on the accomplishments of Rosa Parks and the civil rights movement. She detailed the life of this unlikely heroine who changed things forever by refusing to give up her seat on a Montgomery, Ala., public bus.

That single defiant act helped end legal segregation of buses in Montgomery and in the nation. Rankins said that the Parks lost their jobs and eventually settled in Detroit where they continued working for equality.

"The goal of African-American History Month is to show remembrance of how we got to where we are today," said Alexander. "It is not something that should be shown in just one month, but something that should be celebrated everyday."

"For me, I don't have African-American History Month, I have it everyday," said SFC Denise Knox of ARFOR. Knox and others are hard at work on a fashion show to conclude African-American

Photos by Martin Chahin

A member of Dansa Garfuna, an African dance group, plays his instrument during African-American History Month celebrations.

BRIEFS

ESL Program

The Soto Cano Air Base Education Center will begin an English as a Second Language Program in the Spring 2001 in response to requests for ESL support. However, since changing needs should drive the training train, the ESL program is being written here and packaged from multimedia sources to include English grammar books, CD-ROM, etc. Videos are studied, and a pretest is given in Akamai Workshops on and off duty hours. Regulations prohibit education officers from loaning out or making copies of any copyrighted CD-ROM, software, televisions or cassettes. Even the ESO must get DOIM/J6 and contracting officers' permission to purchase and/or make copies. For more information, call ext. 4420.

Front Gate Policy

Remember to stop and check with the gate guard when departing the base. One of their roles is to ensure proper traffic flow and control of American personnel. Also, JSF personnel will not salute in the buses.

African-American History Month

Joint Task Force-Bravo is observing African-American History Month. A fashion and talent show is being planned and singers, dancers, comedians and musicians are needed. The talent show is scheduled for Feb. 24 at the Oasis Club. For more information, contact SFC Denise Knox at ext. 4336 or 4623.

Personal Security

When going off base, even if just to Comayagua, use extra caution. The level of crime has increased recently, which includes violent crime (five reportedly died in Comayagua over the weekend--one near Mang Ying Restaurant). Also, use the buddy system and stay off the streets as much as possible. Stay alert and don't become predictable.

UMUC Seminars

Registration for the following computer seminars continues:
CAPP 100A Hardware and Software Feb.24 through the 25th
CAPP 100N Desktop Operating Systems Mar. 3rd through the 4th
CAPP 100K Accessing Info via Internet Mar. 17th through the 18th.
Cost to students, with tuition assistance, is $34.50 per seminar plus textbooks ranging from $25.00 to $26.50. Tuition assistance forms are processed at the Education Office. Registration will be completed at the UMUC Field Representation office at Bldg. H-70. For more information, call Luis Ortiz, ext. 4557.

Surviving The Zone's 'Survivor' Night

By Master Sgt. Jeff Bohn
Public Affairs

A freshly barbequed, steak with baked potato and all the fixin's, served up with an ice-cold beverage may be just a fantasy for some folks worldwide watching on the Australian Outback of the weekly television series Survivor, but for patrons of The Zone here on Soto Cano, it is a reality.

Each Wednesday evening, a loyal group of Survivor fans gather at this fully equipped officer's lounge and grill to engage in fellowship, food and film.

Establishing tradition over the past four weeks, the menu for the adventure-show rally has varied from chili to spaghetti, changing each week. The expense is minimal, but the camaraderie is overflowing as people introduce themselves by sharing tales of their experiences here at Soto Cano.

Food notwithstanding, the would-be survivors at The Zone create an atmosphere that can't be matched by watching television a-la-solo in one's own hooch.

For folks who aren't experienced survivors here at Soto Cano — meaning newly-arrived tenderfoots — it is a great social opportunity to meet people they will be working with

Photo by Master Sgt. Jeff Bohn

1LT Christopher Klejdys of Finance and 1LT Justin Zimmer of Logistics serve up a succulent T-bone fit for Survivor Night at The Zone.

for the next several months, and welcoming folks who will usher them to the airport when we are ready to leave.

Officers, GS-12 civilian or senior NCOs who have an interest in the call of the wild should venture to The Zone around 7 p.m. Thursdays with casual attire, an appetite and an attitude for fun and adventure.

Youth advocate: Black history still being made

By SSG Marcia Triggs
Army News Service

WASHINGTON—An advocate for youth used humor and bluntness during an African-American History Month celebration to show Pentagon workers that the hip hop culture is now carrying the torch for legendary African-Americans.

LaMarr Shields, the host of a teen talk show, explained how he informs teens that records were broken before Tiger Woods, and that black history did not start and does not end with slavery.

Shields hosts a TV program in Baltimore titled "What About Us," and a web-casting show on youth issues called "Cyber Teen" at <http://www.ladybuglive.com>.

"When young people talk about Allen Iverson, I tell them about Muhammad Ali. When they talk about the Williams sisters, I talk about Arthur Ashe," Shields said. "When I hear about entrepreneurs of today, I talk about Madam C. J. Walker. They need to understand that these feats are not new."

The youthful speaker -- who in his late 20s is not much older than the artists and athletes who have the attention of the children he reaches out to -- used lyrics from rap artists combined with his own poetry to talk about achievements that have not made it into history books, but have been headlines.

The premise of African-American History Month is to look back at the great things that have happened in the past, to help concentrate on what needs to be done in the future, Shields said. However, he said it's not the time to try to define the African-American culture. Trying to attach a meaning to a culture is like putting it in a box, he said.

"Define the African-American community?" said Shields. "I cannot stand here and do that. Defining the African-American community is like containing a Miles Davis tune or restraining an Ella Fitzgerald scat. It cannot be done."

His experiences with youth and the energy he gave out in his presentation not only entertained his audience, but gave them insight into how today's teens view their achievements compared to previous accomplishments.

"As a parent it was interesting to hear the speaker transfer the achievements of yesterday with what is occurring today. It will help youth go a long way if they hear from another young person the way things were once done and what must continue to happen for us to prosper," said COL Moses Whitehead, the commander for Sierra Army Depot in Herlong, Calif., who was at the Pentagon for the observance. The celebration also included folk songs from Donal Leace, a singer and songwriter from Washington, D.C.

Saturday, Feb. 24, 4 p.m.
Vertical Limit
(PG-13)

Sunday, Feb. 25, 4 p.m.
Dude, Where's my Car?
(PG-13)

Saturday, Feb. 24, 7:15 p.m.

Sunday, Feb. 25, 7:15 p.m.